Professional Disposition Worksheet

Element(s)	Elaboration	Example of Disposition	Share How to Exhibit This Disposition (If you haven't already)
Proactive	With initiative, self-starter, independent	When no one in the group wanted to share their idea or start the group out.	This can see in a group environment in my class as the first time meeting up with the group, it is awkward at first and no one want to start out talking at all. So, I proactively reach out first and start the conversation and make the tension in the air subsize and make it more comfortable.
Self-Directed	Self-motivated, determined, independent	Working on the project during an internship.	I show self-direct disposition when it comes to my internship. I always have a mentor with me when it comes to track my progress of work and how I am going to tackle on that day. With my mentor is out for being sick, I was self-directing myself to complete the task that my mentor wanted to complete and make my own progress on the project while he was gone for a while.
Passionate	With conviction, strong commitment, compelled	When learning a new skill that I do not know.	This disposition was display in internship, where I must code in a language that I never touch on. Showing my passionate of learning, I was able to demonstrate and show how passionate I am to learn that I will go to learn something by myself for the company.

Professional	Using discretion, acting ethically, being astute about a situation	During an interview for the internship.	I exhibit this through my internship interview as it was a casual interview with the director of the IT where my internship take place. I acted professional and greeted him, speak in formal tone, and dress professionally and treat the interview like a serious interview rather a casual one.
Responsible	Using judgement, action with discretion, acting appropriately	Volunteering at the food pantry.	This deposition was shown through it was my responsibility and judgement to help the community in Corvallis and people at OSU to guide them through the course of how the food pantry work and keep them on track with everyone else.
Adaptable	Flexible, agile, adjust in response to change	Working at the library when operation changes during the pandemic.	I exhibit this through the library job I have. When the pandemic hit, the library changes their operation from in-person to online, and I have to adapt to the new way we were operating and help out navigate to the service as we were learning the new way of doing it for a short-term.
Collaborative	Team player, willing to work with others	Working in team during a group project for a class.	I exhibit this through a class project to build UX of your choice, and we must work in group with people in class we didn't know. I display my collaborative as I listen and try to do the work that the team needed me and change anything if the team give feedback on my section of work.

Responsive	Respectful, reacting quickly and positively	ULAing for a computer science class when it comes to responding to student request.	I exhibit this behavior when it comes to concern or questions directing towards me, I show that I am responsive to them by responsive within the 24 hours window when they send that message to me.
Meticulous	Attentive to detail, thorough, accurate	When writing a document for a project for class.	I display this deposition was during class when we must write a long project report to see our progress. I was being meticulous in detail and write down very step and even the small detail that people don't think to include in their document, so that anyone who read the report can recreate the step I took to design my project.
Inventive	Exploratory, looking beyond simple solutions	Homework assignment for coding.	I exert the inventive when it comes to coding for homework. The homework has a simple solution to code the assignment, but I exert this skill and go out of my own way to find another alternative way that we can get to the same solution, but in a different way from everybody else.
